INTRODUCTION

The micro, small, medium economics community, called UMKM in Indonesia must be recognized as a strategic and important potency to accelerate regional development because the growth of UKM increases every year. History has shown that UMKM in Indonesia still exist and develop with the economic crisis that has hit the country since 1997, even as a lifeline for the nation's economic recovery because of its ability to contribute significantly to the absorption of employment. This matter due to the absorption of UMKM to a very large workforce and close to society (Kuncoro, 2008, Srifo, 2010).

Employing UMKM as the main target of regional development must be based on commitment and effective coordination between local governments, business people and non-business institutions and local communities by providing positive and tangible support for human resource development (entrepreneurship training), technology, information, access funding and marketing assistance. The expansion of the export market is an indicator of the success of building a community-based business climate, the implication of which is increasing regional income. According to Silkhondze (1999), the orientation of community empowerment must help the community to be able to develop themselves on the basis of existing innovations, determined in a participatory manner, whose method approach is oriented to the needs of the target community and practical matters, both in the form of individual services and group.

Recently, the Ministry of Cooperatives and Small and Medium Enterprises plans to create 20 million new small and medium enterprises by 2020. The year 2020 is a time that promises so many opportunities because in that year what ASEAN leaders dream of embodied in the Bali Concord II will come true. An ASEAN economic community, whose circulation of goods and services is no longer restricted by national borders, will be realized. This situation has a positive impact on UMKM to be a motivation to improve the quality of their products into export commodities that can compete with other countries.

To support the economic activities of the community, the existence and role of small and medium enterprises is a reality in economic activities, especially in the city of Malang, seeing the potential of the existing resources is very large to be developed. This can be proven by the strengthening of small and medium scale economy which seen as one of the priorities that must be done to sustain a strong economy and the creation of strong fundamentalism in the region.

Through this article, a description one of the real forms of UMKM empowerment will be prepared to meet global competition that is not limited by distance and time. Competition with various countries began to be apparent, the increase in exports and economic development was increasingly high. The ability to penetrate the markets of other countries is expected to be one of the obstacles that need to be made to change for better progress. The UMKM face many problems, namely limited working capital, low human resources, and lack of mastery of science and technology (Sudaryanto and Hanim, 2002). It is also important to concern for academics to participate in contributing to market competition.

LITERATURE REVIEW
The Micro, Small, Medium Economics Community

M. Tohar (2000: 11) mentioned that small business as micro-scale economic activities of people and fulfilling net wealth or annual sales and ownership as stipulated in the Law. Micro businesses as the development of a reliable region to accelerate economic recovery through regional or regional approaches, namely by selecting regions or regions to accommodate priority programs and developing potential sectors with efforts to increase empowerment efforts society.

In Indonesia, the definition of UMKM is regulated in the Law of the Republic of Indonesia Number 20 of 2008 concerning UMKM. Here are the definitions and criteria of UMKM as detailed:

1. Micro Business
   Micro Enterprises are productive businesses owned by individuals and/or individual business entities that meet the criteria for micro-businesses as stipulated in the constitution. The micro business has a maximum asset criterion of 50 million and a turnover of 300 million

2. Small Business
   Small Business is a productive economic enterprise that is independent and carried out by individuals or business entities that are not subsidiaries or not branches of companies that are owned, controlled, or become part of either directly or indirectly from medium-sized businesses or large businesses that meet the criteria of small businesses as referred to in the constitution. The criteria used to define small businesses are businesses that have criteria with assets of 50 million to 500 million and a turnover of 300 million to 2.5 billion.

3. Medium Business
   Medium Enterprises are independent productive economies carried out by individuals or business entities that are not subsidiaries or branches of companies that are owned, controlled, or become part of either directly or indirectly with small businesses or large businesses with total assets net or annual sales proceeds as stipulated in the constitution. The criterion used to define medium business is a business that has asset criteria of 500 million to 10 billion and a turnover of 2.5 billion to 50 billion.

The advantages of micro, small and medium enterprises, according to Tohar (2000: 27), small businesses are in fact able to survive and anticipate the economic downturn caused by inflation and various other factors. Without subsidies or protection, small businesses are able to increase the value of foreign exchange of the state, especially small industries in the informal sector and are able to play a role as a buffer in the economy of small / lower layers of society.
In the other hand, the weaknesses in processing small businesses according to Tohar (2009: 29) weaknesses and barriers to managing small businesses are generally related to internal factors of the small business itself. The disadvantages and obstacles are as follows:

1. The source of capital is limited to the ability of the owner.
2. Too much spending money, debt that is not useful, does not meet with standard accounting.
3. Disproportionate division of labour and employees often work outside the work agreement procedure.
4. Less information about working capital needs is due to the absence of cash planning.
5. Low inventory.
6. Failure management often occurs and managers are indifferent to managerial principles.
7. Planning and control programs often do not exist or have never been formulated.

Besides, the external factors, as detailed:

1. Risks and debts to third parties borne by the owner's personal.
2. Often lack of business information only refers to intuition and managerial ambitions, as well as in proportion.
3. Never conduct feasibility studies, market research and cash screening analysis.

Sukesti (2011), mentioned another weakness of UMKM is the low quality of human resources, including competence, enthusiasm and entrepreneurial spirit. It will become a crucial weakness recently and need to improve by society itself or collaboration with government and academics.

Stakeholder Relationship

In order to empower the community for UMKM stakeholder involvement is crucial to its success. All roles and involvement of UMKM stakeholders develop according to their perspective on UMKM. The involvement of stakeholders is in fulfilling the needs of community empowerment for UMKM that have occurred and have been carried out so far.

Karsidi dan Irianto (2005), argued the relationship between UMKM and stakeholders are able to increase the advancement of UMKM itself

1. UMKM
UMKM as the subject holds a very important role (key holders) in order to empower themselves. In empowering UMKM need to be given motivation and benefits from various opportunities and facilities provided by various parties (other stakeholders) because without the participation of UMKM individually or in groups, it will result in the failure of the empowerment effort undertaken. However, it must be realized that each empowerment program must go on to fulfil the needs of assistance as well.

2. Group / Cooperative
The variety of business model and scale of business does require a variety of different treatments. For this reason, it is necessary to look at the problem after problem, whether there are problems that need to be handled in groups or done individually. Capital problems, for example, will be easier to handle with a group system because it can reduce risk and can facilitate the development. If the micro business group then becomes bigger and properly administered, then it can be developed into a cooperative. Through cooperatives, it is expected to strengthen market bargaining power both in obtaining raw materials, production processes and product sales. Similarly, the various facilities available to cooperative institutions will be enjoyed by its members.

3. Business Association
Business associations can assist UMKM in various aspects for their members, especially in this case the relation to the market will strengthen the bargaining position in trade, both in pricing and payment systems and creating fair business competition.

4. Financial Company (Bank dan Non-Bank)
One of the classic problems of empowering UMKM is the problem of lack of capital, but UMKM is reluctant to come to banks especially because it is related to the many requirements needed to obtain credit facilities from banks. Conversely, often financial institutions face the problem of how to market "capital" collected from the community can be channelled to UMKM entrepreneurs safely. This means that both parties can actually form mutually beneficial relationships. For this reason, a new banking approach to UMKM should be pursued, one of which is through an approach through savings and credit agency and business groups (cooperatives) in providing credit services to UMKM. The existence of a group approach will not be effective if the Bank's views on UMKM still use the old paradigm that credit to UMKM is not economical and risky.

Empowerment

According to Carlzon and Macauley as quoted by Wasistiono (1998: 46) argues that what is meant by empowerment is to free someone from rigid control and give people the freedom to be responsible for their ideas, decisions and actions. He also added that empowerment is an effort to give courage and opportunity to individuals to take individual responsibility to improve and contribute to organizational goals. It can be concluded that empowerment can be interpreted as an effort to give or improve the ability of someone, group or society, not only in the political sphere but also in the social and economic fields, with the aim of enabling and maintaining the community primarily from poverty, underdevelopment, inequality and powerlessness. In the context of the development of the term, empowerment is basically not a new term but has often been raised since the awareness that human factors play an important role in development.

The empowerment strategy that has been pursued so far can be classified in:

1. Managerial aspects, which include: increased productivity/turnover/level utilization/occupancy rate, increase marketing capabilities, and development of Human Resources.
2. Capital aspects, which include: capital assistance (1-5% allowance for BUMN profits and the obligation to extend credit to small businesses is a minimum of 20% of the portfolio bank credit) and credit
3. Develop partnerships with large business programs through the adoptive child father system, PIR, forward linkage, downstream upstream linkages (backward linkage), venture capital, or subcontracting.
4. Development of small industrial centres
5. Guidance for business sectors and certain regions
